

Public servants are just that: they are people who serve their community and their country by pursuing careers in the Government and Public Administration Cluster. From city manager to military munitions officer, the county court clerk to president of the United States, careers in this Cluster involve designing and delivering programs and services that help the government meet the needs of its citizens. Many public administration jobs—such as welfare eligibility workers, equal opportunity officers, code inspectors, and the like—serve as a vital link between the public and the government.
